Artist's Statement:

BACK TO THE WELL

In the past 3 years I've had exhibitions cancelled and painting trips cancelled due to lockdowns but my studio was always open.

I turned 70 this year and I've had plenty of time to think about my paintings and my career. A milestone birthday like that is a prompt for that sort of reflection.

There have been many works that I'm that I am quietly proud of and many subjects that excited me then and excite me now. So some of those themes are represented, or perhaps RE- presented here- The fluidity and transparency of water, the monumental solidity of a mountain or a hill, the revelation of forms and objects and their changing colours by the transitory play of afternoon light, and the unspoken potential for communication that is always there but too often ignored between the human (animal) and other species.

These are some, but not all of the things that have held my attention as a painter over a professional career of over 40 years. I've even made new versions of some favourite images to see how my approach has changed. They were always there for me in the WELL of my memory.
