Artist's Statement

“This body of work evolved into a collection of paintings full of admiration for nature’s design and seasonal evolution, but originally seeded from a moment of dismay with the way I perceived Australia being shown on the world stage as nonchalant about environmental concerns.

My concern became a catalyst for me as a city dweller to examine what was around me in nature, and our collective behaviours towards the environment.

Primarily this body of work is looking at plants, flowers and food produce, with a deeper appreciation of colour, form, pattern & texture found naturally and surrounding us if we really take the time to simply stop and look. Furthering this thought process, a heightened personal and developing awareness of environmental issues regarding food chains links between country and city, waste, and positive steps that can be taken if we chose to live with an appreciation.

This collection of paintings ultimately celebrates nature’s design and invites the viewer to bring it inside, live with it, and be immersed in nature’s offerings.”
